How to use the Wares and Services Manual

The Wares and Services Manual is divided into three parts:

1. A table of contents
2. An alphabetical list of wares
3. An alphabetical list of services

The manual sets out identifications of wares and services which will be accepted by the Trade-marks Branch of the Canadian Intellectual Property Office. Utilizing identification language from the Manual may enable applicants to avoid objections with respect to the wares and/or services identified in their applications for registration.

The Manual does not constitute an exhaustive list of all possible wares and services for which marks may be registered. Accordingly, identifications of wares and services not listed in this manual may also be acceptable. Therefore, a primary use of the Manual's listings, in addition to indicating precise identifications that will be accepted, is to indicate by analogy and example the kinds of identifications that will be acceptable for wares and services not covered by the existing listings.

If this manual does not contain an identification which accurately describes the wares or services covered by a given mark, the wares or services in question should be specifically identified in ordinary commercial terms. If the Trade-marks Branch considers the identification acceptable, it may be considered for inclusion in future updates to the Wares and Services Manual.

When selecting identifications of wares and services from the Wares and Services Manual, the following should be noted:

a) Text in parentheses (): Example: Action balls (Rubber)

The text in parentheses is intended to modify and should precede the ware or service designation in question ie.: Rubber action balls

To assist the user in locating an acceptable identification, the Wares and Services Manual sometimes has multiple entries for the same item. These appear in alphabetical order using key words in the identification. For instance, the above example appears as:

Action balls (Rubber);
Balls (Rubber action); and,
Rubber action balls.

b) Italicized text in square brackets[]: Example: Acrylic resins [indicate specific use or industry] (Unprocessed)

The text in square brackets is provided for instructional or explanatory purposes. It is meant to provide guidance or suggest alternatives, and not necessarily to indicate the exact text to be used ie.: Unprocessed acrylic resins for use in the printing industry

It is very important that a manual of this nature be kept up-to-date and amended regularly. A system has been devised to ensure that this is done although the timing will, at least initially, depend on the degree of amendment required. If you have any comments regarding the manual, corrections to suggest, or omissions noted, please direct these to:
